DoorDash and Uber Eats choices for lunch have been a hot topic for months at Wilson Magnet High School.

Students believe they should be allowed to order food during their lunch periods while the school staff has mixed feelings about the subject.

Asma, a student at Wilson, claims, "Some students prefer not to eat school food because they don't provide us with much."

Many students agree with Asma because, after lunch, they are still hungry for the rest of the school day with nothing to eat.

But Mr. Graziano, an assistant principal at Wilson said, "[ordered] food causes a big interruption because the food rarely gets here on time and is delivered to the wrong part of the building...which causes students to not be in class"

He also added how it may be unfair to some students because not everyone can afford it.

Mrs. Corrigan, secretary in the school's Main Office, said, "It causes lots of stress when having to find the student when the food is delivered."

Mrs. Hernandez, another secretary in the Main Office, stated, "It causes chaos in the classroom too when the food isn't delivered during the students' lunch period...like kids wanting some or skipping class and now we're playing 'Where's Waldo'."

And, Hernandez added, "It causes more work for us!"

Ms. Green, student counselor and advocate from Hillside, agrees with the students but gives some suggestions. Green said, "...maybe sell something different in the cafeteria, or extend the school store hours."

While this has been a difficult situation for the students and staff at Wilson, the administration may be willing to work something out for students under certain circumstances.

Until then, students should limit their choices to ones in the lunch line.

Sunday, February 9th was Super Bowl Sunday and many people were watching to see their favorite team compete as well as the halftime show.

The game ended with the score 40-22 with The Philadelphia Eagles bringing the Vince Lombardi trophy back home.

The Eagles set plenty of records in the game such as Jalen Hurts breaking the QB rushing record and Saquon Barkley breaking the most rushing yards in a season since Terrell Davis.

Many Chiefs fans were greatly defeated and distraught after watching their team fall short of a three-peat, winning back-to-back-to-back Super Bowls, and establishing Patrick Mahomes as the first quarterback to get three championship rings before the age of thirty.

The last two Super Bowls ended in the Chiefs beating the Eagles 38-35 in 2023 and the 49ers 25-22 in 2024.

Many Chiefs fans think that the game was partly “rigged” or “scripted” because of many NFL fan’s boredom of seeing the Chiefs win and Taylor Swift (who is currently dating a player on the Chiefs and is regularly shown on the scoreboard and television).

But most NFL fans, who witnessed the Chiefs unfairly favored throughout the season – league referees going so far as falsely calling two plays in the AFC Championship game that sent the Chiefs to the Super Bowl – wanted to see the team get their comeuppance.

In the end, Eagles fan say, “The team finally ended their historic season, breaking plenty of records and ending it by bringing their second trophy back to Philly.”

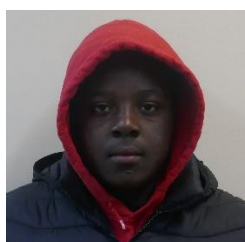

Super Bowl LIX in all its glory can be considered one of the best: especially considering the amazing halftime show performed by SZA and Kendrick Lamar along with a surprising appearance from Samuel L. Jackson...

...and the Chiefs lost.

Be My Valentine

Every year, two weeks into February, a holiday named after the Roman saint St Valentine is celebrated.

Valentine's Day, originating in the 1300s, was created to celebrate and honor the martyr St. Valentine.

According to natgeo.com, St. Valentine was a Roman saint who was born in 175 AD. He became famous and well known because he ministered to, and took care of, persecuted Christians.

Valentine died on February 14th in 273 AD and, in honor of his death, Valentine's Day was created.

The holiday is often associated with love because St. Valentine wrote letters to his love, a jailor's daughter, with the ending "Your Valentine."

Natgeo also states that Valentine's Day is usually a fun, love-filled holiday that includes gifts.

Valentine's Day is celebrated mostly by couples but that's not the case for all.

Kemren Woody, a student at Wilson Magnet High School, celebrates Valentine's Day by giving gifts to important women (like his mother, sisters, aunts...) in his life.

Woody says, "I feel like my mom deserves gifts more than the other women out there."

But SirCordae Hightower, another student at Wilson, says, "Valentine's Day is a day that is just for me and my significant other. I like to make it about her and make her feel special."

While many people have different opinions and perspectives on Valentine's Day, be sure to celebrate it in a way that makes someone you care about feel special.
