Being a student in the Rochester City School District poses its own challenges, one of them being transportation. Every morning Tarnue Gee wakes up at 7:00am to catch his first bus at 7:50am, route 6, Jefferson Avenue. The bus is often packed, forcing him to wait for the second one and jeopardizing an on-time arrival to school. When he arrives downtown to the bustling transit center, the gate serving bus route 47 to Monroe Avenue is often already packed. When the bus arrives, everyone boards, cramming in to make room. When the bus is full, several passengers are left standing. As the bus approaches the closest stop to School Without Walls, students prepare to exit. Many of the people who are standing and sitting must shift around to make room for the students who are exiting the bus.

In the afternoon, Tarnue leaves school right at dismissal, 3:00pm. He makes his way to one of four popular route 47 stops for students on Monroe Avenue. He settles for the stop in front of Dunkin' Donuts along with numerous other students. Occasionally, the bus barrels by leaving around twenty to thirty students behind along with other passengers, some from the nearby hospital. The bus reads "Bus full, bus following." This system has only existed since the beginning of the 2016 school year. In years prior, if the bus passed the stops, any passengers left behind would be forced to wait for the next bus for thirty minutes or walk downtown. This system led to delays in the student's schedule, potentially making them late for obligations such as work. Though most of the time, an extra bus is following, students no longer have the choice to walk downtown unless they pay for the downtown bus out of pocket. To board a downtown bus, students must request a Connection Pass on a bus heading downtown. Upon request the pass expires an hour after issuing, leaving students just enough time to board their second bus and head home. According to Director of Transportation for RCSD, Maria Nello-Dupri the system was created to limit congregation and fighting in the downtown area, but it has a negative impact. Normally many students from School Without Walls would walk downtown, rather than wait for a bus, or walk downtown after being passed by a bus. This has changed for the 2016-17 school year as a security measure to keep students from hanging out downtown. If a student walks downtown, they could be denied admittance, and if they get in, not allowed to board the bus.

Tensions with North Korea

North Korea has never been an ally, but after Donald Trump's election, it seems that the diplomatic relations between the U.S. and North Korea have gotten worse. Kim Jong-un has been in power since 2011, after the death of Kim Jong-il. There have been numerous missile tests for over a decade, all of which have failed in numerous ways. North Korea has been trying to build a long range missile to transport a nuke to the West Coast of the United States. The reason that North Korea wants to make a move on the United States is because the U.S. is protecting Japan and South Korea, both in close range of North Korea, and both with stationed U.S. troops.

North Korea makes it clear that they are a threat to both Japan and South Korea. They constantly test successful short and medium range missiles as an intimidation tactic. Due to these tests, both Japan and South Korea wouldn't attack North Korea because the missiles would devastate their major cities. Both also don't have nuclear weapons.

It is speculated that if North Korea can successfully create a long range missile to hold a nuclear bomb, then the U.S. would be forced to back down, and be unable to protect Japan and South Korea. This is because if one launches a missile/nuke, the other will fire back. This will either force Japan and South Korea to build their own bombs or be left defenseless. Nine countries currently have nuclear weapons, those being, the United Kingdom, France, Israel, Russia, Pakistan, India, China, North Korea, and the USA.

Several have urged the U.S. to do something while they still can. Donald Trump has been trying to get China's help. China not only trades with North Korea, but they have a diplomatic relationship. It is thought that if the trade between the two is cut off, North Korea will be short on supplies. This would hinder their research or production of long range missiles.

On April 28th, North Korea tested out a new version of their long range missile towards the sea of the Japan. It broke up minutes into to flight, and is the third missile tested, the last being on the 15th of April. A U.S. aircraft carrier is making it's way to the Korean Peninsula as a defense, and most likely for more research. Officials are currently figuring out the next step, but are remaining prepared.

Teacher & Student of the Month

To show support for fellow students and teachers, the Teacher & Student of the Month column was created. For this issue of 799Insider, the nominations were up to the newspaper club. The students came up with a teacher nomination, and the teachers came up with a student nomination. The winner of the May issue of 799Insider is Adrienne LaLiberty and Genesis Silva!

Adrienne was nominated for being a cool teacher, that not only is a good teacher, but a teacher that puts her foot down. Being her eighth year teaching in the RCSD, second at SWW, Adrienne began teaching at twenty-two years old.

Adrienne attended three colleges. She attended Niagara University for one semester, then went to Geneseo where she graduated with an English Major, and Bachelor of Arts. She then pursued her Master's degree at Nazareth for Educational Technology.

When asked about her perception as a teacher, Adrienne stated "I love my job as a teacher. I could never do anything else!". Adrienne expressed that the hardest part to begin teaching was finding the line between being an authoritative figure and having a good relationship with students. She expressed that teaching at School Without Walls has been a different experience because the students gravitate towards respect.

On her free time, Adrienne likes to garden, read, and run. During summers she fosters dogs to prepare them for adoption. Adrienne shared that an achievement was actually winning Teacher & Student of the Month, an award she is honored by.

Genesis was nominated for her demonstration of responsibility, and dedication for whatever she puts her mind to. Genesis is a Junior that focuses on work and takes initiative. Expressing her passion for school, Genesis shared that she wants to go to the army after graduation and then attend a Suny school. Her favorite subject is math because she feels she is good at it. She works for Ken for community service where she makes poster boards and anything that he needs for his classes.

Genesis has considered Keuka or Michigan State because she likes their softball team, a sport she enjoys. She has won a scholarship to the University of Rochester which left her surprised because she was chosen for it. Genesis plans to continue doing well in school and continues putting thought into her future.

When he arrives downtown to the bustling transit center, the gate serving bus route 47 to Monroe Avenue is often already packed. When the bus arrives, everyone boards, cramming in to make room. When the bus is full, several passengers are left standing. As the bus approaches the closest stop to School Without Walls, students prepare to exit. Many of the people who are standing and sitting must shift around to make room for the students who are exiting the bus.

In the afternoon, Tarnue leaves school right at dismissal, 3:00pm. He makes his way to one of four popular route 47 stops for students on Monroe Avenue. He settles for the stop in front of Dunkin' Donuts along with numerous other students. Occasionally, the bus barrels by leaving around twenty to thirty students behind along with other passengers, some from the nearby hospital. The bus reads "Bus full, bus following." This system has only existed since the beginning of the 2016 school year. In years prior, if the bus passed the stops, any passengers left behind would be forced to wait for the next bus for thirty minutes or walk downtown. This system led to delays in the student's schedule, potentially making them late for obligations such as work. Though most of the time, an extra bus is following, students no longer have the choice to walk downtown unless they pay for the downtown bus out of pocket.

To board a downtown bus, students must request a Connection Pass on a bus heading downtown. Upon request the pass expires an hour after issuing, leaving students just enough time to board their second bus and head home. According to Director of Transportation for RCSD, Maria Nello-Dupri the system was created to limit congregation and fighting in the downtown area, but it has a negative impact. Normally many students from School Without Walls would walk downtown, rather than wait for a bus, or walk downtown after being passed by a bus. This has changed for the 2016-17 school year as a security measure to keep students from hanging out downtown. If a student walks downtown, they could be denied admittance, and if they get in, not allowed to board the bus. This is because downtown drivers are not allowed to accept student issued touch and go passes, therefore forcing students to pay.

Of course some schools have express buses, a line going from the school to a popular main street (i.e St. Paul), but a school like School Without Walls is too small for that busing method. Instead, School Without Walls is the only school in the district with All Day touch and go passes. SWW is placed at the end of route 47, which starts in Pittsford and ends at the Transit Center. By the time the bus gets to the four reachable stops for students, it is likely already full, causing several passengers to get passed. Public Information Officer Tom Brede shared that routes were constantly being monitored, and stated that if a bus did pass a passenger, student or not, he would "hope" that they would contact RTS. When asked if extra buses could be sent for those passed by a bus, he said "We don't just have extra bus drivers sitting around." RTS has smaller buses, known as ROCKET routes, which serves a route but goes to fewer stops. It raises a question as to why RTS can't send some of these buses on popular routes, shortly behind regular buses to pick up any left behind. It would only run at a time of day when routes are busy. When the thought of a line expansion for route 47 came up, Tom suggested working through RCSD to coordinate with RTS, which could obviously take some time.

Principal Dr. Idonia Owens feels as though students are being treated unfairly. "Opening the transit center was a fiasco. The security and drivers have been so rude at times." There should not have to be problems, or challenges dealing with transportation. All parties would be satisfied with a common resolve, one that could easily be done. School Without Walls is very active in the community, and gives their students a lot of responsibility. If students want to walk downtown, they shouldn't have to pay out of pocket. To fix that problem, RTS can put a bus pass machine in the main office of School Without Walls. This machine can be found on every bus, as well as in customer service booths in the Transit Center. This would allow the office to issue students Connection Passes, so that they can walk downtown without a problem. As for students being passed by the bus, serious thought needs to go into the situation. Is it in everyone's best interest to replace the 40ft bus with a 60ft, or would multiple buses work out better? An important voice to listen to when a problem is being resolved is the students. Everyone wants their day to be easier, and there can be a better outcome, which a student could have, rather than a quickly thought up solution to solve a general problem that leaves little ones in its mist.

Fight or Flight?

Fight or flight? This time it's fight on flight, but you weren't surprised were you because apparently lately airline incidents are the new trend. A Delta Airlines pilot hit a woman and walked away. According to The Shade Room and the thirty second video floating around social media, two women were fighting in the airport and after an attempt to break the women up, he slapped one of them and walked away!!! They cannot let this fly. This is highly inappropriate, and as a professional for a billion dollar business, the worker should have found a better approach to this situation. What is going on with airlines lately? Just a few weeks ago, a man was recorded being dragged off a United Airlines plane that was overboarded. According to CNN, United Airway employees needed to attend the flight, therefore seats needed to be sacrificed. Of course they offered a compensation but when no one wanted to give up their seat, they were forced to draw names and when the man's name was drawn, he refused. This is when the security guard took it upon himself to drag the man off of the plane in a very forceful way that even causing him to bleed from the mouth. A lawsuit has been filed, and ruling is being determined. The video has circulated around the internet and has China stirred up. Apparently China is United Airlines greatest customer, transporting over 1,000 passengers to the U.S daily. This may cause a decrease in their ticket sales with customers holding the assumption that the man was dragged because of his race and discrimination towards Chinese people.

Rapper DMX's Situation

According to The Shade Room, rapper (or should I say former rapper?) DMX checked himself into a rehabilitation facility in California. The artist has history with substance abuse but due to a "medical emergency" he decided to put his health first and get the help that he needs. Unfortunately, this caused the cancellation of some tour dates but his health is far more important than a performance.

The Fyre got too Hot

Apparently a festival called the Fyre Festival sparked the internet's opinion as it's poor planning and unfit conditions left attendees stranded and unhappy. Supposedly this event was created by Billy McFarland and another former rapper, Ja rule. Remember him? Yeah me neither. These former rappers never fail to fail us. Anyway the two planned the event in a deserted area. The location in Exumas was so empty that it contained no water or sewage. I'm sorry but is this not already sounding like it's headed towards the drain? They were so "naive" and actually decided to go through with it. There was some sort of storm that broke down their festival tents and disconnected pipes, this caused everything to pretty much go down and as the people arrived food sources were limited and people pretty much suffered. Images were uploaded by event goers of the food they provided, it was a burger with no meat just lettuce, cheese, tomato and no dressing. This event was truly a disaster and is it fair that all this people had to suffer because plans failed like Ja rule's career? McFarland noted that next year the event will be well put together and everyone who signed up will attend for free, the rest of the tickets will have a percentage donated to Bahamian Red cross. Some paid thousands, and they are currently in the process of receiving refunds.

Netflix Show Review | 13 Reasons Why

Years after the 2007 book release of 13 Reasons Why, a hit show was released onto Netflix which grew a lot of popularity on social media. A reason for its fast-growing popularity is in part due to Selena Gomez's role as an executive producer, whom had previously taken a break from her singing career after accepting the Pop/Rock Female Artist Award at the AMAs. The show has received amazing reviews, with an 8.9/10 on IMDb, 91% on Rotten Tomatoes, and a 95% according to Google users!

13 Reasons Why focuses on the main character Clay Jensen, who listens to a set of thirteen tapes to figure out why his crush Hannah Baker committed suicide. The box of tapes goes through several different people, all of which are a reason for Hannah's suicide. Throughout the show, the viewer gets to see how the tapes effect the listeners, ultimately ending in crucial events. While the show is for the most part enjoyable, there are points that are simply boring. At some points, it almost felt as if scenes were dragged to reach their goal of thirteen episodes. Of course, each episode had a climax, but having Clay take, in real life, thirteen hours (days in the show) to get through a few tapes, when his peers pushed through them quicker and passed them on within what it seemed like a day, slowed down the show.

The show raised topics that have both been a learning experience and contribution to several debates. Suicide is very triggering to many people, and the way the show went about it only left people upset. Experts felt as though Hannah's creative method of a suicide message would encourage others to take their own life. Of course, that is a very possible theory; it falls onto the debate that viewers will act out what they see on TV or play in a video game. If you finish the show, there is another episode at the end with cast and crew thoughts. In this episode, producers argue that they wanted the show to be real. One of these "real" scenarios is when Hannah commits suicide. SPOILER. She takes a razor blade and slits one wrist at a time, conveying the agony she is enduring. She bleeds out in the bathtub, in which her mom sadly found her sometime later, refusing to believe she was dead. In my opinion this part was very much needed to highlight not only a loved-one's reaction to a suicide taking place, but how it happens as well. This very real, gruesome scene grabs the attention of the audience, and forces a realization of what just took place. The final opinion lies on how the viewer ultimately feels, if you want to watch 13 Reasons Why, then you can binge it on Netflix. Rumors have surfaced of a season two, but it doesn't seem fitting since there was thirteen episodes to match the title. If a follow up is wanted, the best route is a movie, which could possibly touch on other social issues.

Overall, this is an important show to watch. It will, for the most part, keep you on the edge of your seat wondering what happens next, and wake you up when it comes to the topic of suicide.

Videogame Review |

Mass Effect Andromeda

Following the unfortunate ending of the Mass effect trilogy, Bioware knew their fans wanted more. On March 21, 2017, Mass Effect Andromeda was released. Personally, I had been looking forward to an addition to the trilogy since finishing Mass Effect 3, years ago. The ending left many, myself included, craving more. Mass Effect Andromeda is the story of several species being put into cryogenic pods which preserve the body. The pods were spread onto three different arks, each holding a different species. Everyone is put into pods for 600 years to “start a new life”, though if you played previous games, or played side missions in Andromeda you know there is another reason. You play as either Scott or Sarah rider from the human ark, one of whom will inherit SAM, an artificial intelligence needed to explore the planets. It is inherited as their father chooses to save whoever you play as, as the other is put into a coma due to technical difficulties on the ark. This position is known as Pathfinder, throughout the game you are tasked with creating settlements and exploring planets. Of course, there is an enemy that will fight no matter the cost to prevent any settlement.

When the game finished downloading, I jumped right into the game. At the beginning, there was a lot of dialogue and cutscenes. It felt boring to me, and that was after an hour of gameplay. The next day I played some more, and got really immersed. There was so much to do, whether it was a side quest, or pursuing a relationship with one of your teammates.

Picture from: Arts, Electronic. "Mass Effect: Andromeda News – Official Site." Masseffect.com. N.p., 06 Apr. 2017. Web. 25 Apr. 2017.

Of course, Bioware still gave players choices, which determined the end of the game. This only made the game better! Any choice you make is final, this factor added some form of difficulty. I enjoy how Mass Effect games are worth every penny. Sadly, a lot of games charge sixty dollars for a bad story, or a game that becomes boring after a week. You can't say that for Andromeda, or any of the Mass Effect games. Mass Effect Andromeda took about 80 hours for me to 90% complete. I would have gone for 100%, but glitches got in the way. This is the longest game I have played in 2016, and 2017 so far! Missions are broken into three categories: Main, Side, and Team/Alliance. The latter two of course are optional, but when it comes to missions, Andromeda is far different than the trilogy. The endings are all unique. In ME3 when you play the final mission the game is over, whereas in Andromeda most of the bonus missions are still playable. I didn't know this at the time, so I completed anything I could. All it did was enhance the story, so I'm not complaining.

When it comes to issues, I personally experienced nothing that could ruin the game for me. While reviewers disliked the animations, I did not see it as a problem. What I dislike is that the campaign was not co-op, it only would have been better. I give the game 7.5/10, but I want more. Read more about Andromeda and its previous game, Mass Effect 3 at www.799insider.com.

Ask Column

The Ask Column was created for students that have questions, but don't want to reveal themselves. Maybe they are going through something in regards to a relationship, it could even be an academic question, for example, "Where can I get help with homework?". Questions will be anonymous and reviewed by the Ask committee. The questions were submitted and it was noticed that there was a low amount of Ask questions. In the future, the team is considering more effective ways to receive your questions in the most discreet way possible. If you have any suggestions or questions, you may email 799insider@gmail.com. Please note that the Ask Column was designed to help you get answers to questions you may not feel comfortable asking. No question is a bad question, and it will not be answered in a judgemental way. If 799Insider receives an overwhelming amount of questions, they can be found at www.799insider.com where you can also check out extras.

Q: What happened to the event that was being hosted by 799Insider?

Q: Will there be a newspaper club next year?

A: As of now, we are trying to decide how it will be handled. Is a senior going to take it on and work on it for their senior project? Will it be a regular school club, synonymous to Page Turners Book Club? Stay tuned at 799Insider.com, you might even hear more information at the event.

799Insider Sports

Track & field and Baseball/Softball have started, and School Without Walls students participate in both sports. The Edison track team has done an excellent job so far, with the boy's team coming in second overall at the Brighton Relays Invitational and with a record of 3-1. The girls also came in second overall at the same Invitational and had a good record as well.

In Baseball and Softball, the Monroe Red Jackets have been doing an excellent job! They have beat teams like Edison Tech and East to name a couple. If these kids can keep up the excellent work and graduate they can be in the same situation as the newly signed Jarron Jones. Jarron is an Aquinas graduate, and is now on his way to becoming a NFL superstar!

799Insider Sports

This Month in the 799Insider Sports, March Former New England Patriots player Aaron Hernandez was found dead in his prison cell on April 19th. Former tight end player was sentenced in 2015 to life without parole for the murder of 27-year-old Odin Lloyd, the boyfriend of his fiancé's sister. According to Fox news, Lloyd was shot in a deserted park near Hernandez's home. Evidence proved that Lloyd was with Hernandez at the time of the killing, including recordings from Aaron's home security cameras. The NFL player had a history with violence, he was found guilty for possession of a firearm and ammunition connected to an accusation of a drive by shooting that he may have been a part of in 2012. He was found not guilty in April 2017, days before he was found dead. He was found hanging from a bed sheet that was attached to a window, according to CNN, Hernandez used several items to create a barricade and prevent entry of the room. This was found shocking to his family and attorneys, they didn't suspect him to be suicidal. A source for CNN says that he was optimistic and looked forward to proving his innocence in another case. This has sparked outbreaks on social media, with fans and supporters questioning was this a suicide or a setup? Other speculations have been that Aaron committed suicide to sacrifice a hefty sum of money that wouldn't go to him because of his charges, it is suspected that he did this so that his fiancé and four-year-old daughter would get the money. Either way, forgetting all theories that were made, a 27-year-old man took his own life. Killer or not. He was a father, a son, a brother, a cousin, a fiancé, and beloved by many.

Condolence go out to Aaron Hernandez and his family.

Local Monroe Ave. Eateries

As a student that takes the bus, I've been to a few places and I figured it would be a cool idea to do a quick review on restaurants local to School Without Walls. I am in no way a professional cook and the judging of these restaurants is strictly based on experiences and encounters that I have had while eating there.

McDonald's: Monroe Ave.-

This is a very common fast food restaurant that students at School Without Walls go to for lunch or afterschool while waiting for the bus. It's not really much that can go wrong at McDonald's and the food is basically the same based on your taste. But an experience that I've had while going to this McDonald's was the very, very, very rude staff. It is so shocking how rude the staff of this location is, when they serve you they act like they are being forced to do it. One worker there was so mean and nasty to me and a few other friends, that we have called and reported them several times. Fortunately they contacted the location, but unfortunately one day the manager called me from behind the counter, by name, and pulled me to the side. Not only was I shocked but I was confused, She told me that she know I was the one that called and complained about one of her workers. She stated that it was unnecessary, and that she never received complaints about the worker. When I brought up the fact that he physically threatened a friend of mine, she didn't seem to recognize it as a problem. This incident has been reported to Dr. Idonia. Dealing with numerous incidents, I stopped going there.

Rate: 5/10 | Cleanliness 5/10 | Staff 1/10 | Food 5/10.

Dunkin' Donuts: Monroe Ave.-

This experience is different from the one at McDonald's. I visit Dunkin frequently due to its proximity to SWW. It's convenient and expensive, just like everything else nowadays. I really struggle to understand why the workers at this restaurant move so slow. They are very unorganized. They take their time on every order I've had. Not once have I ordered from this location and received "fast food". Another problem that I encounter a lot is messed up orders. For some reason, they can't get my order right. Clearly, they are understaffed but they are only "accepting applications" they need to be hiring more workers.

Rate: 6.5/10 | Cleanliness 8/10 | Staff 6/10 | Food 6/10

Avenue Diner: Monroe Ave-

This is honestly a very excellent restaurant to go to, I recommend it 100%. I have gone here a few times to have lunch with friends and it is just truly amazing. Not only are the waiters kind and patient, but the cooks are fast and the wait is very little for the food. If you go, it shouldn't have to be said that you are respectful. It is a privilege to be able to sit and eat in a restaurant, don't get that taken away. If you do go, I recommend the Philly-Cheesesteak. It is only $8, and it tastes good every time! I personally have to try more foods on the menu to give Food an honest review, that doesn't bother me though!

Rate: 9/10 | Cleanliness 10/10 | Staff 10/10 | Food 9/10
